WHAT IS AN HBCU?

In Title III of the Higher Education Act of 1965, Congress officially defined an HBCU as a school of higher learning that was accredited and established before 1964, and whose principal mission was the education of African Americans. HBCUs offer a rigorous academic learning environment, innovative programs for students, culturally relevant curricula and activities, and a welcoming environment for all students. They prepare students of all races for leadership and life after graduation. There are 101 HBCUs across the nation.¹
DID YOU KNOW?

Three years after graduation, HBCU graduates earn $10,000 more annually than individuals with only a high school diploma.²

An HBCU graduate working full time throughout his or her working life can expect to earn $927,000 in additional income due to a college credential.³

Tuition rates at HBCUs are nearly 30% less on average than at comparable institutions. The average cost of attendance at four-year HBCUs in 2019-20 was $25,412 compared to $35,049 for four-year non-HBCUs.⁴

HBCUs represent only three percent of America’s colleges and universities⁵, yet they produce 15% of bachelor’s degrees and 19% of STEM degrees⁶ received by Black students.

Six of the top ten institutions where African American science and engineering Ph.D.s earned their bachelor’s degrees between 2015 and 2019 were HBCUs.⁷

Research shows that African American HBCU grads report having experienced more support and higher levels of engagement than their peers at non-HBCUs.⁸

AFRICAN AMERICAN HBCU GRADS ARE:

- More likely than non-HBCU African American grads to report having at least one professor who made them excited about learning (74% vs. 62%) and professors who cared about them as people (58% vs 25%)

- More likely to be thriving in purpose and financial well-being than non-HBCU African American grads

- More likely to strongly agree that their university prepared them well for life outside of college than non-HBCU African American grads (55% vs. 29%)⁹
UNCF is the nation’s largest private scholarship provider to minority group members. Each year, UNCF awards more than $100 million in scholarships to more than 10,000 students at more than 1,100 schools across the country, including our prestigious network of 37 private HBCUs. UNCF is the nation’s leading advocate for the importance of minority education and community engagement.

Since its founding in 1944, UNCF has raised more than $5 billion for scholarships and other direct support for its member institutions and has helped more than 500,000 students graduate with college degrees.

Thurgood Marshall College Fund

The Thurgood Marshall College Fund (TMCF) represents 47 publicly supported HBCUs and predominantly Black institutions (PBIs). To date, the organization has awarded more than $300 million in assistance to its students and member schools.
Scholarship

UNCF Scholarships

This website provides various scholarship, internship and fellowship programs offered by UNCF—and how to apply. Students are encouraged to create a profile to find the best scholarship match.

White House Initiative on Historically Black Colleges and Universities

The White House Initiative on HBCUs is a government-wide effort to strengthen HBCUs. A key program is the HBCU Scholars Recognition Program which recognizes current HBCU students for their excellence. The Initiative provides outreach and engagement opportunities for the scholars and students will also have the opportunity to meet with senior officials from both the White House and the U.S. Department of Education.

UNCF Empower Me Tour

The UNCF Empower Me Tour is a free, traveling college- and career-readiness road show established to inspire and motivate high school students, college students and recent college graduates in academic excellence, career success and personal responsibility.

Common Black College Application

The Common Black College Application offers students a single application to apply for 68 separate historically Black colleges and universities.

Youvisit.com/collegesearch

At Youvisit.com/collegesearch, students, families and educators can take a virtual tour of Howard University, Jackson State University, University of Maryland Eastern Shore and numerous other HBCUs.

TheHundred-Seven.org

TheHundred-seven.org provides key information about HBCUs, including a “find your HBCU match” tool based on major and academic programs of interests, top news stories, scholarships and HBCU trailblazers.

HBCU First

“HBCU First” helps Black youth navigate college and career access. Its HBCU Exploratory Program is a college success and career access program for college-bound Black youth and HBCU students. The program consists of the College Success + Career Access Workshop Series and the Near-Peer Mentoring Program.
The College Navigator HBCU listing consists primarily of the latest data and information from the National Center for Education Statistics on tuition costs, programs majors, admissions, enrollment and general information.

HBCU Lifestyle is a one-stop shop for Black college living. From finances to fraternities and sororities, schools to scholarships, this is a great source for all things related to Black college living.

“It wasn’t until I went to Spelman that I felt like an institution actually cared for me, prepared a space for me, and made sure that I was walking out the door better than I came in...I know that Spelman has had a direct impact in that in my life, and it’s so wonderful to experience that and have sisters that are rooting for you.”

HBCU alum

“I felt like during high school, I missed out on the cultural events that I would have had if I went to a predominantly Black high school or traditional public high school... It was important for me to go to an HBCU just so I can understand more of the traditions and get more of my history instilled in me.”

“It was an instant connection with the campus. I don’t know what it is. They say it’s something about Morehouse campus that’s just so special and I can attest it. I don’t even know how to explain it. It’s just like, you know you’re supposed to be there. Like, ‘This is where I’m supposed to be, this is where I’m going to be successful,’...it uplifts you and it makes you feel bright. After I got that feeling, I was like, ‘Yes, I got to go to Morehouse’.”

“The real world does not look like us. The real world does not operate like us. But I would also say that I think attending an HBCU does prepare us, because we can always look back and have a support system while we go into this real world. I can always call my professors to this day. Professors that I’ve taken freshman and sophomore years that’ll give me advice on the real-world... I have professors who push me, tell me, ‘Keep going.’ It’s just that support group. Yes, it does prepare us for the real world because you need their support in this real world, you need them to tell you, ‘Don’t worry about what the haters are saying, you keep going’. At the end of the day, the HBCU is our support to go into the real world.”

Young woman attending an HBCU, class of 2021

“Tuskegee has a lot of museums on campus. Each semester, they’ll have a sign-up sheet, and students are able to participate in this little walk around campus. You have the ambassadors leading small groups and they take you around the campus and just go over all of the details, all of the historical facts about Tuskegee: the campus, Black culture, racial issues that have been developing over the years after slavery...I participate and I jot down notes, and I go home at the end of the day, and I look over those notes, and I apply it to my own life, things that I’ve experienced, things that I’ve went through, things that I’ve seen other people experience. It makes me much, much more knowledgeable...”

Young man attending an HBCU, class of 2023

“I feel like professors knew how to talk to you and they knew all the things that you were struggling with in your day-to-day life because they kind of went through it too.....it just felt like it was someone on your side in a school building... I feel like I could really do a not watered-down version of how I really felt about police or how I really felt about the government and things... They understood what I was really saying...I think that those professors, they just let us freely speak how we felt like everything was happening and how we felt like life was really going.”

Young woman who graduated from an HBCU, class of 2020

“The professors, they really care about you. I will say they care about you because they also know what you’re up against. They know that everything is not going to be easy even after this class and even after you graduate...”

Young woman attending an HBCU, class of 2022

“We held a march, a Black Lives Matter march, everyone on campus, and we marched through the city of Tuskegee with posters and banners. I think that just sets the tone as far as what Tuskegee is about, and what they believe in, what they fight for. It’s different events or things that I’ve experienced that here at Tuskegee that really motivates me to want to learn more.”

10 The first Spelman College quote was derived from focus groups conducted by UNCF researchers with HBCU students in 2016-17. The next set of quotes are excerpts from a joint UNCF and Charter Schools Growth Fund report entitled, “Making the Case for K-12-HBCU Partnerships.” The quotes were derived from interviews with HBCU students who graduated from high-performing charter high schools and attended HBCUs. The interviews were conducted by Dr. Rosie Emerson in 2021. Some quotes were shortened in this report due to space limitations.
