Dear Friends,

Welcome to the UNCF Portland “A Mind Is...®” Gala! I’m deeply grateful to each of you, our sponsors, donors and community members, for joining us tonight in support of our mission to uplift students and expand access to higher education. Your presence here plants powerful seeds of hope, and together, we’re helping those seeds grow into opportunity, achievement and lasting change.

Tonight, I’m especially honored to recognize two extraordinary leaders whose work is transforming communities across Oregon and beyond. Toya Fick, president and CEO of Meyer Memorial Trust, brings decades of leadership in education, policy, and racial, social and economic justice. Her commitment to systemic change and community-centered philanthropy continues to shape a more just future for Oregon.

We are also proud to honor Marcy Bradley, chief community engagement and equity officer at the Oregon Community Foundation. Through her work, she helps guide OCF’s statewide efforts to support thriving, inclusive communities, ensuring that philanthropy is responsive, collaborative and grounded in the lived experiences of Oregonians.

Both Toya and Marcy embody the spirit of service, advocacy and transformational leadership that aligns so deeply with UNCF’s mission. Their dedication inspires all of us and reminds us of the power of collective action.

Tonight is a celebration of community, commitment and the belief that every student deserves the chance to thrive. Thank you for being part of this journey and for helping us build a future filled with promise.

FREDERICK D. PATTERSON

Outstanding Foundation Leader of the Year AWARD

Toya Fick

President and CEO, Meyer Memorial Trust

Toya Fick is a strategist, changemaker, and collaborative leader whose work is grounded in equity, impact, and a deep commitment to Oregon's communities. She serves as President and CEO of Meyer Memorial Trust, stepping into the role at a pivotal moment as the organization advances its bold mission: to accelerate racial, social, and economic justice for the collective well-being of Oregon's lands and peoples.

With a track record of transformative organizational leadership and long-standing relationships across the state, Toya brings both vision and pragmatism to complex challenges. Toya previously served on Meyer's Board of Trustees for more than six years, including as Chair during the overlapping crises of 2020—historic wildfires, a global pandemic, and the national reckoning with racial injustice following the killings of George Floyd, Ahmaud Arbery, Breonna Taylor, and others. In that moment, Toya played a primary role in Meyer's launch of Justice Oregon for Black Lives - Meyer's largest initiative in history, a five-year, $25 million investment in Black-led and serving organizations.

Before her CEO appointment, Toya was Oregon Executive Director at Stand for Children, where she drove lasting policy change and built bipartisan coalitions in support of student success. She was a key architect of Measure 98, a voter-approved initiative that infused billions of dollars into Oregon's high schools. The measure catalyzed a 40% increase in career and technical programs and contributed to a six-point jump in graduation rates, especially for students of color and low-income students. Toya also helped create the Center for High School Success, now active in nine states and serving more than 89 districts and 50,000 students. She played a central role in the creation and passage of Oregon's Student Success Act, a landmark $2 billion investment in education equity and school improvement.

A first-generation college graduate, Toya was born and raised in rural Louisiana and earned her degree from the University of Chicago. She began her career as a middle school educator before joining the legislative staff of then-Senator Hillary Rodham Clinton. She relocated to Oregon in 2010 and quickly made it home.

In addition to her role at Meyer, Toya has served on the boards of the University of Oregon, the International Women's Forum - Oregon, and Foundations for a Better Oregon. She is also a proud mother of two and considers parenting her most rewarding role of all.

UNCF is proud to honor Toya Fick for her outstanding leadership and unwavering commitment to advancing equity in education and opportunity. As President and CEO of Meyer Memorial Trust, Toya has championed transformative initiatives that strengthen communities, expand access, and drive meaningful, long term change. Her dedication to creating a more just and inclusive future reflects the very mission we strive to uphold, and we are grateful to recognize her impact and partnership.
