

Jennifer Felix Bio

Jennifer Felix is an accomplished business development and marketing executive with more than 25 years of experience spanning accounting, legal services, litigation support, strategic marketing, and relationship management. She currently serves as Vice President of Sales & Marketing for a national legal funding company, where she focuses on building attorney relationships, business growth initiatives, strategic partnerships, and community engagement.

Throughout her career, Jennifer has held leadership roles in business development, forensic accounting, litigation management, investigative services, and legal finance. Her professional background includes extensive experience working with law firms, financial professionals, and business owners throughout New Jersey and New York. She has built a reputation for her strong interpersonal skills, leadership, and ability to cultivate lasting professional relationships.

Jennifer began her career in public accounting before transitioning into litigation consulting, forensic investigations, and business development. Her experience includes fraud analysis, economic damages, trust accounting, operations management, marketing strategy, and event planning.

In addition to her professional accomplishments, Jennifer has remained actively involved in charitable and community organizations. She has been active with B'nai B'rith leadership initiatives and has supported Eric Johnson House through community involvement, advocacy efforts, and charitable initiatives focused on helping others and strengthening the community.